

Dallas Children's Health Project

The Dallas Children's Health Project (DCHP) provides comprehensive medical care to children and adolescents. DCHP provides services through school-based health clinics and a mobile medical clinic. Children and families in Dallas face numerous challenges when accessing healthcare. These include poverty, lack of insurance, inadequate transportation, and language barriers. Issues DCHP addresses include developmental delays, family dysfunction, domestic violence, child abuse or neglect, mental illness, nutritional problems, and minor acute illnesses. Along with pediatric primary care services, DCHP provides comprehensive dental and mental health care services to their patients.
