

Memphis Children's Health Project

The Memphis Regional Children's Health Project (MRCHP) mobile medical and health education clinic offers preventive health education, and connects children to additional medical services. MRCHP provides services to rural West Tennessee children and families, because despite their proximity to a hospital system, there are still many challenges to accessing healthcare. Barriers to care include a lack of health insurance, insufficient transportation, and a limited knowledge of available resources. Children in these communities are frequently treated for chronic asthma, diabetes, obesity, elevated blood pressure, and elevated lead levels. MRCHP aims to decrease emergency room visits by bringing comprehensive primary care directly to the community.
